

Guidelines on Expected Qualifications of AOS Fellows

(Approved by Council on 31 August 2022)

AOS Fellow nominees are expected to have the following qualifications:

- Professional experience: Mid-career or senior standing in a professional ornithological position, or one directly impacting avian biology, conservation, management, and/or education.
- Society membership: At least five years as an Elective Member of the AOS, including active (paid) membership during the three most recent years.

Strong nominees will also demonstrate many of the following:

- Engagement with the Society: Attendance at multiple annual AOS meetings, engagement on one or more AOS committees, service to AOS publications, or other AOS service.
- Contributions to Ornithology as a discipline: At least ten impactful contributions to the ornithological literature or equivalent contributions to the fields of applied or conservation ornithology. These may be publications in peer-reviewed journals, books, significant conservation reports and policies, or other products (outreach, education, campaigns, partnerships, management actions, museum collections, etc.).
- Contributions to Ornithology as a community: Additional impactful contributions to the ornithological literature, conservation actions, work on AOS journals and meetings, teaching and mentoring ornithological topics, years of service to the AOS, service to the broader ornithological community, broadening participation of diverse populations in ornithology, or combinations of the above.

Exceptional individuals that do not display all listed qualifications may have other accomplishments that recommend them for Fellow. Nominators should highlight exceptional qualifications on nomination materials.

Nominations to the class of Fellow may be submitted in two ways 1) by three Fellows with active memberships, or 2) by the Nomination of Fellows and Elective Members Committee. Under the second mechanism, any AOS member may submit names (including their own name) for consideration to the Nomination of Fellows and Elective Members Committee. Nominators are encouraged to recognize diverse candidates from across our discipline. All nominations should be submitted through the AOS Member Portal.
